RIDGE HAPPENINGS

Messrs. C. W. Blackburn, J. L. Brown and Arthur Brown had quite an excited chase after a mad dog on Sunday last week.

Mrs. Blackburn was the proprietor of Mr. Blackburn, had been kept chained for some time, as it had shown signs of some ailment. On Tuesday night, after the heavy rain, Mr. Blackburn decided to put the dog in his inclosure, which he was carrying to his house, which he happened to be there at the time. The dog showed no signs of viciousness until turned loose in the inclosure, still having the collar and chain attached. Then it began to bark and snarl, and making every effort to free itself by leaping the wire fence. After watching the dog's actions for a few moments and deciding it was surely suffering from hydrophobia, the gentlemen thought it necessary to seek shelter within the house, which they scarcely did before the dog succeeded in bolting the fence and making off. The night being very dark and stormy, and not knowing what direction the dog had gone, they decided to accept the proffered invitation of Mr. Blackburn to spend the night with him. Early the next morning the three gentlemen started in pursuit of the infuriated animal. They found the dog in the chain on the soft ground. The dog was soon located, having become entangled in some underbrush in the woods some distance back of the house. Mr. Blackburn, the younger Mr. Brown, asking him to please end the suffering animal's life. In the excitement of the moment he fired too low, striking her slightly about the feet and legs. This did not do much harm, but it was more infuriated. About this time the gentlemen realized their position—they found themselves with only an empty gun, no ammunition and in close proximity to the mad dog. The trio made all possible haste to the home of Mr. Brown, who fortunately was close by. Mr. Brown, now decided to remain with his own home for the present while his son Arthur and Mr. Blackburn, well armed with loaded guns, made their way into the woods to the pursuit of the mad dog. In a few minutes after they had left, on glancing toward the door Mr. Brown saw the object of their quest making all possible efforts to enter his house. He gathered up his gun and him and soon secured a heavy "k" (as he was now without firearms), and dealing the ferocious brute a powerful blow about the head, succeeded in knocking it back at the same time using all of his might in yelling to the other parties, who soon reached the house and put an end to the dog's life. The dog was highly valued by its owner and well known by the sportsmen through this vicinity.
